Melani Cammett

Dr. Melani Cammett is a Clarence Dillon Professor of International Affairs in the Government Department at Harvard University. She also has a secondary faculty appointment in the Department of Global Health and Population at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health. Cammett's recent books include Compassionate Communalism: Welfare and Sectarianism in Lebanon (Cornell University Press 2014), which won the American Political Science Association (APSA) Giovanni Sartori Book Award and the Honorable Mention for the APSA Gregory Luebbert Book Award; A Political Economy of the Middle East (co-authored with Ishac Diwan, Westview Press 2015); and The Politics of Non-State Social Welfare in the Global South (co-edited with Luran Morris MacLean, Cornell University Press 2014), which received the Honorable Mention for the ARNOVA book award. Her current research projects explore governance and social service provision, identity politics and postconflict institutional arrangements, primarily in the Middle East.

Cammett is also beginning a new project on the long-term historical roots of distinct development trajectories in the region. She has published numerous articles in academic and policy journals, consults for development policy organizations, and is the recipient of various fellowships and awards.
