

Rami G. Khouri

Biography

Rami George Khouri is an internationally syndicated political columnist and book author; Journalist-in-Residence and co-director of global engagement at the American University of Beirut (AUB); and non-resident senior fellow at the Harvard Kennedy School. In 2006, he launched and directed the Issam Fares Institute for Public Policy and International Affairs at AUB. He was previously the executive editor of the Beirut-based Daily Star newspaper, and editor-in-chief of the Jordan Times, and was awarded the Pax Christi International Peace Prize for 2006.

He teaches or lectures annually at the American University of Beirut and Northeastern University. He has been a fellow and visiting scholar at Harvard, Mount Holyoke, Princeton, Syracuse, Villanova, Oklahoma, and Stanford universities. He also serves on the Joint Advisory Board of the Northwestern University Journalism School in Doha, Qatar.

He has BA and MSc degrees respectively in political science and mass communications from Syracuse University, NY, USA.